

Advanced Technology Christmas Letter

After months of painful (and often boring) research, we are proud to bring to the unsuspecting public (that means you) another in an unfortunate series of...

Christmas Letters From Tim

(suitable for framing)

This year's theme is Advanced Technology. That's why I wrote Advanced Technology in the big box on the top of this sheet. The technology we are using is Virtual Reality. Some of you, I know, are familiar with reality; this is very close. On the other side of this sheet you will find a Virtual Christmas Letter. Turn this over and stare at the black dot in the middle of the sheet. After anywhere between one to seventeen hours, an actual Christmas letter will appear before your eyes. You will easily recognize it. It contains the normal boring, re-hashing tripe about all the junk we claim we did through the past year. Most of it is intended to brag about stuff we really didn't do but wish we had. Hopefully, you haven't saved the previous year's letters because they are identical. We just changed the dates (the "search and replace" feature in word processors is great).

So, have a seat (why are you reading this standing up?), turn this over, visualize the letter, and call the eye doctor.

Merry Christmas until next year,

Tim

(your brother, in most cases)
